August Q\u0026A Intro

What's your 'typical' daily routine? How do you get all that reading in? How do you stay fit and healthy?

What are your thoughts on the role that policy or even the role that private sector influence can play in shaping the development of young men in a time when many young American men seem utterly lost?

What's the first book you loved and why?

If you could combine two former US Presidents to make one, which would you combine and why?

Why are you so \"pro crypto\"?

When you're hit with a failure in business or life, what's your process for bouncing back quickly and regaining credibility?

What do you look for when hiring talent at Skybridge/SALT?

What's your \"typical\" weekday/weekend look like? How do you manage everything?

If a Democratic president wins the 2028 election, would you be open to a Cabinet position or other position in the administration, in an effort to bring the country together and push back on the polarized nature of our politics?

What is your view on work-life balance?

What are you most proud of changing your mind about and how did you get there?

What is the latest book you are reading? How much time do you spend on reading books a week?

If you could add a handful of people to lead the country with no questions asked, who would those people be and why?

What are your views on federal budget cuts to US research universities and the potential for those cuts to impair America's ability to innovate and lead?

If you want to switch careers or passions midlife, what advice would you give?

Can you pinpoint a specific life-defining moment or pivotal event that significantly altered the course of your path, either in your career or in other aspects of your life?

Who are the Top 3 people alive today whom you admire and respect, and why?

When you look at the turbulent state of American politics and the economy, what is going well and what gives you hope for the future?

Do you think the way Gavin Newsom is trolling Trump on social media will be ultimately good or bad for his political career?

What has helped to keep you centered during difficult moments in your career?
